Opinious, however, were creetly divided in England apon the American war, and the sympathy which the Americans expected they did not receive. This undoubted had caused a momentary feeling of irritation and sovemes; and in addition to this, there was also this fact to be borne in mind, that the two nations, however friendly they might be, were rivals in trade and maritime power, and he was afraid it had always been the case among men and among nations that where there was a good deal of rivalry there would always be a little jesiousy. But whatever things might have been said, either noon our side of the atlantic or upon the American, he enternational existence a real and serious experience of what war meant and what it cost. With 2000 000,000 of debt, with four millions of white inhabitants discontented and dissatisfied, as after their subjugation they inevitably must be; with four millions of accroes turned loose upon society, who for a long time to come would be rather a source of trouble than of strength; with all the social and political system of one-third of the Social and political system of one-third of the Social and political form of the social system of the syst which had been roused in America were not aliased, he did not think that we should be the objects of attack. There was, if the Americans chose to avail themselves of it, a very real and serions cause of difference between the American Government and the Government of France. The Monroe Doctrine, a ruling principle laid down by American statemen, had for the last twenty-live years become an integral part of their public policy, and they would not permit, it hey could prevent it, any new sovereignty or dependency to be created by any European Power pion the North American continent. In the face of this well-known and well-understood rule of American policy, the government of France, taking advantage of the chronic state of disturbance existing in Mexico, had established nominally indeed, an empire under an Anstrian prince, but really a government which was a dependency upon France There never was a more direct challenge and defiance by one nation in the teeth of another; and if the Americans had not up to the present time ac-

The public feeling in regard to slavery will consider the public feeling in regard to slavery will so back. Twenty years hence men will wonder how they ever could have supported such an accurred and monstrous system. I bewall whatever lot or part I may have had in it, and am not a shamed to make the public confession of it, nor should any man. It is human such an accursed and monstrous system. I be-wall whatever lot or part I may have had in It, and am not ashamed to make the public con-fession of it, nor should any man. It is human feesion of it, nor should any man. It is human or err, divine to forgive.

We shall look back with amazement npon he fact that we sustained au institution nnd which the master and mistress were judge, jury, and executioner for offenses, and that the slave had no redress. Farms and plantations isolated so that none but the family were there; or it any other white person, he was a poor, missable bired whipper and driver. The slave could not be a witness in court, and the family would not inform on themselves, nor would their characteriess overseer lose his pay or the poportunity to gratify his brutish nature, by giving evidence; and thus the slave smilered.

I venture the prediction that within twenty

Under the system of slavery as it existed, who that has lived on plantations or farms in any Southern State that has not known of the growuman or woman and of the tender girl, black or more than half white, tied up, stripped, and unmercitally whipped, and at every lash with the corred instrument of torture—the raw-hide—cry with piercing shrieka, "Pray, sir, pray, master," and in response to the piteous cries, uncans, and begging, receive only lashes and cuses whill the strength of the torture and bis angry passions were exhausted and his hieeding, quivering victim then unbound and required to start cheerfully and pleasautly to obey orders under the pain of having the dose repeated. No picture that can be drawn can portray the full measure of cracity and inhumality that has been meted out to this poor shelpless, fanitless people. Their ignorance and helplessness has ever been made an excuse for this cruelty. Ordinarily, we pity a man's ignorance and helplessness and strive to assist him, but with the poor black it has been a crime and an excuse tor enslaving and cruely missuing him.

TRIGG COUNTY? TRIGG COUNTY?

To the Editors of the Louiseille Journal:

We are very anxious to know down here in frigg which is the Union candidate for Representative—for whom Union men should vote?

We have three candidates for that position in his county. First comes Squire Larkins, onroresert Representative, who seems to delight nepposing the Constitutional Amendment and the present Administration. He says in his preches that he never will vote for the amendment, because it would deprive us of that right of property in slaves which our forefathers fought, bled, and died and are willing to fight, bleed, and die for again; contending, at the same time, that he is one of the most conservative Union men in the State. Next comes sime, who calls himself a loyal Union Demonator of the old faith and order. He boasts in his speeches that he was opposed to any more men and money in 1-64. and that he is now alterly opposed to the amendment and the present Administration. He also tells nathat be a cipposed to the act of the Legalature in 1862 to amend chapter 15 of the Revised Statues, entitled "Citizens, Expatriation, and Aliens." In fact, he seems to be opposed to everything that the Government has done for the last four of five years; yet he contends that he is one of the most conservative Union men that can be started up anywhere, or, in other words, he would have us to know that he is the very mus for whom we should vote if we wish to preserve the Union. Next comes Squire Carr—an oil usar—his head silvered over with the frost of age, having passed through many trials and tribulations. He now comes before the popple with a clear conscience and announces himself a conditional Amendment. He tells us "that he has been an mechangeable and unconditional Union man during the whole war, and was in To the Editors of the Louisville Journal:

He tells us "that be has been as nuchangeable and unconditional Union man during the whole war, and was in havor, in 1863, of more men and money for carring on the war against the rebels." He also take us that he is a zeakuts supporter of the present Administration. Now we, the amendment men down this way, would like to know which of the three above mentioned candidates as the true Union man. We contend that Squire Carr is the true Union man, we contend that Squire Carr is the true Union man, and, if he is, then the other two are not truly Union men, and are not entitled to the name of Union, and should, therefore, cease to call themselves Union candicates. One point, however, we might with p-ofit take a lesson from the English, and that is in the frankness with which most of the candidates address their constituent; and ask for their enjoort. GENTLEMEN: Only two weeks ago I Informed yon of the murder, by hanging, of Mr. Charles I. Wise, of Hardin county, not far from this village. It now becomes my painful duty to record the urprovoked murder of one of the clitzens of this county at Meadeville.

On Wedneday, of last week, two men, one of them calling himself Magruder, anposed to be a brother of Bill Magruder, who lately died in the Millary Prison at Louisville, entered Meadeville, and, after crinking a number of times at a low grogery, Magruder invalred for Mr. James J. After several luef-fectual efforts to induce Newton to leave the louse with him, Magruder asked him if he had not been a Federai soidler, and on Newton's answering ves, he deliberated drew a re-

But, after uron, the crowd assembled again, and the excitement had evidently increased, and continued to increase until about 256 o'clock, when the front door of the jail building was broken open with a sledge hammer and the crowd rushed into the jail. How they reached the prisoners we did not learn, but they were so on dragged forth into the street, beaten down with clubs, and shot.

After they were dead they were taken up and hanged to a lamp poot on the corner of the street, where they were hanging at a late hour in the evening. They were ultimately, we learn, taken down and buried.

You, judging from this distance, eay: 'Deliver he four millions of free people into the hands of their former oppressors, now embittered by heir defeat, and they will make their condition their cerest, and they will make their condition worse than before. It of arting from the same principles, and after four years of close and thoughtful observation of the races where they are, say I am uncellingly forced to the consistion that the effect of the war has not been simply to "empirical" the content of the c the effect of the war has not been simply to "emitter" their relations, but to develop a rooted antagonism which makes their permasent furion in one positical community an absolute impossibility. The sole difference between no, then, is in the degree of hostility we find existing between the saces, and its probable permanence. You assume that the extension of the tight of suffrage to the blacks, leaving them intermined with the whites, will care all intertrople. I believe that it would rather be like the decisions in that outer darkness of which Milton speaks, where "Choo umpire sits." "Chaos umpire sits.

And by decision more embroils the fray."

Here is his solution: Yes, as I believe with you, that the right to Yes, as I believe with you, that the right to life and liberty are insilienable, and more than identit the danger of leaving a laboring class at the entire mercy of those who formerly owned them as alaves, you will say I am bound to furnish some solution of the problem which shall not deny the right or incur the peril. So I am, and the only real solution which I can see is the peaceable separation of the races. But, you rejuly, foreign colonization will break down hopelessly under the very vastness of the labor, even if it were not tyrannical enough to expel these unfortunate people from the land of their birth. I great the full weight of the objection, and therefore say the solution is thus narrowed down to a peaceable separation of the races on the soil where they now are.

The foregoing is strictly in harmony with the lews which we have repeatedly expressed in When he hears his best efforts to restore civil regard to the future relations between the two The whites and blacks of the South government in the South stigmatized as atwhen the freedom of the latter shall be fully tempts to "conduct the Government to a pure established, will be more widely separated from otlam" he may very well think that the each other than ever before, and hence the idea time to revoke the suspension of the writ of libof equality between the two is a wholly impracticable one. The negro population of the Sonthern States exercised a far greater political Let those who complain cease to give cause tor the continuence of the suspension and it will power through the system of slavery than they can ever exercise again. It, in the progress of The election is now very near at hand, ime, political privileges are ever bestowed nd, for the sake of peace and harmony and upon the race by the separate action of the regood feeling in the community, we again and spective States, they will be quite narrowly re stricted, and conferred upon only a small num diere, whether paroled or not, or have taken ber who may possess peculiar qualifications for the caths prescribed by law or not, or have citizenship. The argument made on this point by General Cox is conclusive, and should at registered under orders from the headquirters of the Department of Kentucky or not, and all once stop the mouth of every negro-enfirage faguerrillas and others, who, without belonging to regular rebel military organizations, have in patic in the country. Hen. Henry W. Hilliard, formerly of Ala bams, an old and distinguished gentleman, recently delivered a rousing Union speech to the people of Richmond county, Ga, in which he adviced a hearty, ungrudging, and unreserve return to their allegiance as American citizens on the part of the people of the South. His -perch has the ring of the true metal, and cannot fail to have a good effect. We quote the fellowing as a specimen:

fellowing as a specimen:

The South will row, sir, not grudgingly, but freely and cheerfully, acknowledge this as our whole country—from the St. Lawrence to the Gulf of Mexico. and from the Atlantic to the Pacific. This I do, sir. I wish to have no nolding back; no such swearing eternal vengeance against the Government as Hamilter made his son Haunital swear against Rome. I would have no beart burnings on the part of the South; I do not doubt that the great body of the people of the South will be true to the Government of the United States.

Such is our country to-day, sir—agreat country, with a glorious inture—it we be true to ourselves. It is wise, you will agree with me, sir, not to seek to quarrel with the North, heuse-orth we are Americans—Americans at the Bott—americans at the Bott—americans at the Bott—americans at by Mr. North Messenger, who seems to fancy himself not only a North Messenger but a South the Fast—and Americans at the West—eve re Americana, recognizing a common conn and a great Government. There will be I believe, an earnest and general purpose to stand by that great Government.

I know the President too well to believe that I know the President too well to believe that he extertains are other view on this subject. He is a man too loyal to the principles of the Constitution to entertain any other view; and I believe, aft, that he extends military rule over these States, not because he is unwilling to extend our State lines and boundaries to their former status, but because he is untilling to the tendence of the prevailing in them. As secon as he is assured of this, he will gladly welcome them back with all their former rights, except each as have been modified by recent events. I sim anxious to have those rights restored, to have our divil courts once more opened, and I therefore rejoice that this step has been taken.

I have said that we are States; and I think that after the present military government. I have said that we are States; and I think that after the precent military government passes away, we shall revert to all our rights. The proclamations of the President indicate this, and they will be carried out with such moditications as have been made by the constituted authorities. We must recognize slavery in this country as dead. This is necessary for the well teing of the South.

Mr. Hilliard was strongly opposed to war and available, but the such a became he as a better that

It will be found, we think, that the most ntelligent, upright, and honest men of the South will cordially support the Government in its measures of peace and restoration. The oppoition will be confined to groveling politicians who will seck to use the ignorant and malignant in the accomplishment of party purposes for ersonal aggrandizement.

John Minor Botts has obtained from the President the pardon of his old partner, Frank-fin Elearns.—Boston Post. We are glad of it. Mr. Stearns is a most high hearted geutleman, of great moral worth and large wealth. H's place is about four miles from Richmond, and is one of the most beauti ful and magnificent in all the country; and he ensee his hospitalities with the finest taste and the noblest manificence. We had the pleasure of dining at his house last December, with Mr. Alexander Rives, brother of Wm. C. tives, and Mr. Charles Palmer, a most agreeatle gentleman of Henrico county. The three gentlemen were all for Lincoln and the restoration of the Union. Mr. Palmer had been imprisoned for his Unionism, and Mr. Stearns had been repeatedly threatened.

by land and sea and of course the vast expendithan a quarter of what they were, and the reduction is going on every day, while the public revenues from internal taxation and revenue duties are vastly increased and are increasing, so that everything now furnishes, financially, the best encouragement. and even yet it is by no means effectively ap plied throughout the country, for the sim tesson that it takes time to get the great machincry in working order. Yet the results thus far are beyond all previous calculation, and promise to be far better every week in the future. The receipts from taxation are now about a million of dollars a day; and the Internal Revenue Eurean at Washington estimate that they will fully equal this figure for the next three months. Judging the returns being made in New York city, a much higher estimate for the whole country might be made. The receipts for imort duties also are very heavy, being at that port alone, at this time, at the weekly average of two millions four hundred thousand dollars It is true that this very fact is taken advantage of to damage the public credit, but for this the law provides a very simple and effective remody. So satisfactory is the working of these two great engines of national revenue, that it was semi-efficially announced from Washington yesterday that "the Secretary of the Treasury is of the opinion that, owing to the continued reduction of the expenditures of the Government, the Treasury can be kept in an easy condition by receipts from the usual source of revenue, and meet all requisitions which can be properly made upon it until the meeting of Congress." Three hundred million dollars a year is a reasonable estimate that is made of the expenses of the Government hereafter. It would seem by our present experience that there would be no difficulty in raising a much larger sum, and that taxation to this extent would be very easily and contentedly borne by the people. It is stated by the two New York District Collectors of Internal Revenue, whose aggregates of colcountry, that the taxes are on all hands paid with the greatest cheerfuluess, and that it is tault-finding. The fact is, that, as regards finances, our Government to-day holds a position of the greatest power; and when, by next year, the machinery of revenue is perfected and applied to all the States, North and South, our strength will be even more imposing.

Starting from our homes, when the shadowy ingers of twilight have just veiled the flery orb of day from our eight, when in the country al ture is gradually sinking to repose: the birds, fitting hither and thither almost noisele tired to sing, and only a low chirp and the futter of their wings tell us of their presence they hasten to their airy homes; work is done; all nature reste; the weary plow-horse enjoying his hard-earned supper in his comortable stall; the lazy cows are dozing quietly the roadside as we pass. And now, as we stand upon the hillside, a scene of transcendent velinees stretches out before us: the face of twilight grows duskier as night comes on, resplendent in all her starry beauty, her dark face writing bewitchingly on all who will look upon Night is ever lovely, but oh! so much more beautiful in the country.

As she takes her throne in the firmament, her worshippers bowing from one end of the heavens to the other, bringing with her a holy ones, calming it when the turbid waters of dicontent gather themselves and fill the inmost cells with bitter murmurings, gently it floats upon our senses, smoothing our mountains of corrow down to insignificance, and filling us with pure longings for a firmer hold on the things that fade not away for a name and possersions in the mansions of the blest, far beyoud the starry regions now glowing before our eves, and enrosesing all we see or can imagine. in the heavens! Palaces made by God's own hand for His beloved! Beautiful hope, blessed promise! We have stood until before the maestic Queen of Night her gilttering hosts stand LOUISVILLE TO CAIRO in close array, their glittering arms dazzling our eyes in splendor. We gaze netil their beauty sinks into our hearts, binding as with a magic spell our very hearts, holding our feet entranced, as if 'twere a sacrilege to move or speak in their bright presence, with God's holiness shining through each as if they pierced the walls of heaven and a part of its giories was shining through. Close by us, in the bushes, the whip-poor-will sounds his dreary, though not to us sad sad note, and, roused thus from our pleasant dream thoughts, we start again toward the humble church whither we are tending our footsteps this evening ce up the bill our road lies through thick woods; tall trees, looming up on either hand been erjoving. But the soft musical rustle of the leaves, the low twitterings of wakeful birdings in some of the thousand tlay homes nestling in the branches on either side and over our heads, is still a beautiful cause of sweet and refreshing thoughts. Heaven always seems cearer to me in the free open country, nearer at night when the star-gemmed sky seems bend-

In company with thought and the living picnres of night in the woodlands, we may walk a mile before we arrive at the little church of reations of His own hand, it stands. Tall. majestic trees bow their gracuful limbs in silent erence to the honce they shadow, while away the topm st branches the leaflets murmur soft songs of prake which flow slowly and sweetly through the perfumed air of night. Chastaneoga Railread from Nashville to Cowan, Tenn The church is lighted, its windows gleam brightly, while between the rough hewn logs which form the walls bright rays of light creep and twinkle cheerily. Within, a few are gathered to worship, and as we seat ourselves among them, I bethink me of the many descriptions I have read of the colemnity of grand old churches, of their awe inspiring beauty, and I wonder could anything be more grand than lived to principal posts being Chattanooga, Cleveland, Loudon, Knoaville, and Greeville. wonder could anything be more grand than this, as the voice of the minister breaks upon my ear in earnest petition for the blessing of ng lovingly toward us, than elsewhere.

The deep ellence without and within, save his rolee in prayer, and those of the thousands of leaflets whispering their sweet amens in accompaniment through window, crevice, and door, is inexpressibly selemn to me.

Another voice of praise as it rises and flows Another voice of praise as it rises and flows stifully to us, than earnest words, the life and suffering of our Redeemer? Surels not As we again etcp into the open air, turning our footsteps homeward, we think the glorio enty and solemnity of night is at the greatest. The air is thick with periame from tree and flower, we brush the fragrant dew from every leaf as we pass along, and our hearts are full of worship as they perceive the wondrons sweetness of sleeping nature. ELWARD.

A TRIP THROUGH A DESERT -We extract by Arminine Vanberry, the following thrilling sketch of a trip through the sandy desert of Central Asia:

After leaving this hospitable sojourn, the caravan penetrated further and further the un-trodden wilds of Central Asia, until they reached the sands desert on the route to Bokhara. Here they were doomed to encounter the most diemel terrors. It was the month of July. The first station brought them to a sea of sand, extending as tar as the eye can reach. On one side it was formed into high hills, like waves lashed into that position by the storm. On the other side, it was like the amouth waters of a still lake, serenely rippled by the Western wlud. The camele and asses sank to their kness at every step. Not a bird was visible in the air; not a worm or beetle upon the earth.

The bonce of these who had perished on the way, whitening in the sun, as they lay collected in heaps to guard the march of future trav elers, formed a sombre memorial of departed life. The strength of the camels had been exhausted before they entered the desert, and two of them died at the first day's station. The terrible heat had already left the travelers without strength; two of the poorer members of the company, who had tramped on foot by the side of their feeble beasts, became so sick that they were unable to sit or ride, and had to be bound at full length upon the camels. As long as they were able to articulate, they kept exclaiming, "Water! water!" the only words that escaped their lips.

On the fourth day one of them was relieved by death from the torments of thirst. Before he drew his last breath, his tongue was quite black, the roof of his mouth of a grayish white, his lips shriveled, and the teeth exposed. Before leaving the desert the author had only about six glasses of water left in his leathern bottle. There he drank, drop by drop, to appease the burning heat. Presently his tongue egan to turn black, and, alarmed at the danger, he drank of half the remaining store at a ught, thinking thus to save his life. But it only increased the fever in his veins. His strength was rapidly leaving him, when the caravan was struck by the tebbad, a poisonous wind of the desert, which had harried rapidly toward them with death in its appearance.

The camels, from which they lost no time in dismounting, uttered a loud cry, and fell on

The wind rushed by with a dull clattering sound, leaving the party covered with a crust of sand two fingers thick. The first particles that touched the body seemed to burn like fishes of fire. Had they met the wind six miles deeper in the desert, the whole caravan would doubtless have perished. The author was left half dead. He could not dismount from his camel without assistance. As he wa laid full length upon the ground, a fearful fire ecemed to consume his interior; he was driven almost to madness by the pain in his head; he was apparently suffering the agonies of a horrid leath. Starting toward midnight on the perilons march, he fell saleep, and on awakening in the morning, he found himself in a mud hut, surrounded by people with very long beards. He had no strength to speak to them, but they kindly treated him, gave him something warm to drink, and afterward some sour milk mixed with water and salt, which soon set him once more upon his feet.

About $3,000 changed hands upon the result in a game of billiards at Hardord, the 1515 dlm 511 Main, but Fifth and Sixth ste players being Frank Briquet and George Colton. Briquet won by 227 points out of 1,000, though Colton gave him 100 at the start.
